RE: Confusion spreading over the promotion of the new art collection by Ward Five's famed and mentally challenged artist.

In a recent press release from WWWG, the local Ward 5 Press Corps was alerted to the troubling news that Emil appears to have relapsed into a serious addiction to Red Curry Pancake Mix.

The statement indicated that he is likely to return for an extended period to the local Gris-Gris Addiction Clinic.
Journalists were cautioned that Emil often confuses Little Joey Buyhim's son with his late friend, the legendary Hunter Thompson, who was known to be one of his earliest mentors and guides.
This context is essential for understanding Emil's comments and should be taken into account when reporting on the situation. The spokesperson for the WWWG Plantation and Print Shop recently addressed an unflattering rumor that has surfaced, denying claims that a controversial statement attributed to Emil was meant to suggest he drew inspiration for his new collection from his friend, Mister DeHunter, the son of the former Big Guy, Little Joey Buyhim.

The spokesperson clarified that Emil's intention was to express admiration for DeHunter's extraordinary talent in selling his simpler artworks for prices that rival those of Picasso.

This clarification aims to dispel any misunderstandings and highlight the genuine respect Emil holds for DeHunter's artistic prowess.

The representative for WWWG acknowledged Emil's initiative to introduce a unique “loss leader” bonus aimed at enticing art collectors, potential Ambassador Candidates, and members of the affluent “Trust Fund” Baby demographic who may be hesitant about investing in Emil's artwork. He suggested that any purchase might/could include access to a 1-900 number for an ice cream shop in Delaware, a place rumored to be frequented by a prominent figure (AKA the Big Guy) during extended holiday weekends. The spokesperson playfully implicated that this 1-900 number option adds an intriguing layer to Emil Art investment while making it more appealing to those uncommitted to considering a purchase.

The spokesperson for the WWWG has confirmed that Emil's closing sales pitch for his new art collection is impressive, highlighting that Emil is significantly less greedy than his counterpart, DeHunter.

Unlike DeHunter, who prices his artworks at a staggering $500K, Emil has chosen to keep his prices more accessible to the common man.
Moreover, Emil has generously offered to share 15% of the profits with the original Big Guy, a stark contrast to DeHunter's 10%.

While WWWG actively encourages sales and investment in Emil's new collection, the spokesperson strongly urged buyers to purchase exclusively through authorized sales agents or the publisher.
They reiterated a serious warning about Emil's ongoing mental health crisis, emphasizing that no one should send money directly to him, regardless of any requests for assistance with food, rent, or bail for a foreign jail.

This caution remains in effect even if Emil promises to donate an additional 10% to well-known charities like "Save the Whales."

The Emil Collection is now showcased at the renowned Gris-Gris Addiction Treatment Center
